What are Interrogative Sentences?

Interrogative sentences are a fundamental type of sentence used to ask questions. They are easily identified in English because they typically have a distinctive word order and often end with a question mark. Here are some key characteristics and types of interrogative sentences:

1. Word Order: In many cases, interrogative sentences start with a helping verb (like "is," "are," "do," "does," "can," etc.) followed by the subject and then the main verb. For example, "Is she coming today?"
2. Question Words: Often they begin with a question word like who, what, where, when, why, or how. These sentences seek specific information. For example, "What time is the meeting?"
3. Yes/No Questions: These are questions that can be answered with a yes or no. They often start with a verb or an auxiliary verb. For example, "Can you drive?"
4. Choice Questions: These questions offer alternatives and are often structured with "or" in the middle. For example, "Would you like tea or coffee?"
5. Tag Questions: These are statements turned into questions by adding a tag at the end. For example, "You're coming to the party, aren't you?"
6. Rhetorical Questions: These are asked not to get an answer but to make a point or to lead to further discussion. For example, "Why don't we try something new?"
