The story follows his journey to the distant future where robotic omniscient beings have taken over Earth and humanity has been split into two distinct species: the Eloi and the Morlocks.

Permanency in The Time Machine

The central theme of The Time Machine is permanency, or the idea that certain things are unchangeable and will remain the same no matter how much time passes.

Wells uses this idea to explore the implications of time travel and its effects on human civilization. He suggests that, although some aspects of the future may be altered by time travelers, certain things remain unchanged due to their permanency.

Story and Sketch of The Time Machine

The Time Machine tells the story of a nameless time traveler who builds a mechanism called "The Time Machine", which allows him to travel through different timelines. He travels to the year 802,701 AD, where he discovers humanity has split into two species: the Eloi and the Morlocks.

The Eloi are a peaceful, intelligent race who live in small villages and rely on agriculture for their sustenance. They are ruled by the Morlocks, an aggressive species that live underground and use technology to control and exploit the Eloi.

The time traveler eventually finds out that the Eloi and Morlocks have been locked in a vicious cycle of exploitation and domination since the dawn of time, and he is determined to disrupt this cycle.

He discovers another timeline where humanity has evolved into a perfect utopia, free from any suffering or pain. Inspired by this revelation, he sets out to make a better future for the Eloi and Morlocks by bringing back hope and freedom.
