extremely close relationship with her father, who was very encouraging of her intellectual and artistic interests.

They moved to Amsterdam in 1933 when the Nazi government was rising to power in Germany and Anne started attending Montessori school there at the age of eight.

Life of Anne Frank Before Hiding

Anne was an average student in school, but she had a keen interest in books and writing. She shared her thoughts and ideas with her friends through diaries, which she started writing at the age of thirteen.

In 1941, when Anne was twelve years old, Adolf Hitler declared his plans to annihilate Jews in Europe. Her father, Otto Frank immediately began making plans to hide his family and find a secure place for them.

Invasion of Nazi and the Beginning of the II World War

On 10th May 1940, Nazi Germany invaded the Netherlands. Nazis imposed restrictions on Jews living in the country such as wearing yellow stars, attending separate schools, limited access to public transportation and stores, curfews, and other forms of segregation. Otto Frank wanted to keep his family safe from these restrictions as well as the mass deportations of Jews being carried out by Nazis.

Hiding of Anne Frank

In July 1942, the Franks decided to go into hiding in a secret annex located at Prinsengracht 263 in Amsterdam. Anne was thirteen years old at the time and she wrote about her experiences in hiding in a diary that she kept for two years. The family moved into the annex on 6th July 1942, along with four other Jewish refugees: Hermann van Pels, Auguste van
